Biographical/Administrative History

In 1911, after a survey of the neighborhood in Grand Crossing, the Archdiocese of Chicago purchased six lots of land at the corner of 78th Street and Dobson Avenue. At the time of its establishment, the parish served an Italian congregation. However, within two years of its founding, English speakers joined the congregation, and thus the parish has been a diverse mix since its beginning. The first pastor of St. Francis de Paula, Father Joseph Angeletti, returned to his native Italy after serving for 11 years as the parish leader. Cardinal Mundelein appointed Father Ambrose Murray to replace Angeletti as the new pastor, and Murray took the reins by purchasing more land upon which the parish could build a new church as well as a school.

Arthur Foster drew the plans for a school and church building. According to one church history, Foster designed the buildings “to provide twelve class rooms and a temporary church for seven or eight hundred people.” The reasons for building a temporary space instead of a new permanent church building are unclear. Construction on the new school began in August 1923, and it was dedicated in September 1924. The school opened under the administration of the Sisters of St. Francis of the Immaculate Conception of Clinton, Iowa. As the neighborhood population increased, the parish required additional space to serve its growing congregation. The auditorium of the new school served as the temporary church for several years. To accommodate the expanding parish, the old church building served as a parish hall.

A convent designed by Francis J. Ellert of Wilmette was constructed for the nuns administering the school in 1929, and in 1931 a Tudor Gothic rectory was completed. The parishioners of St. Francis de Paula suffered through the Great Depression as did most of the nation. However, in 1936, the parish cleared its remaining debt and decided to build a new permanent church building. In order to pay for the new edifice, the parish created the “Century Club” and asked able parishioners to contribute one dollar each week for one hundred weeks. Approximately 500 families joined in this effort, and in 1937, construction began on a new church building designed by the architectural firm of McCarthy, Smith and Eppig, and it was dedicated in 1938.

Msgr. Murray passed away in 1944, and Father Harold Trainor succeeded him as pastor of the parish. During his tenure, the school built an addition and the church installed stained glass windows in 1949. Before arriving at St. Francis de Paula, Father Trainor had assisted Father Moses Kiley to inaugurate the Catholic Charities of Chicago. He was named a Monsignor in 1957 and died two years later.

After Monsignor Trainor’s death, Father Thomas McKugo succeeded as pastor of the church. Father McKugo had already resided at St. Francis de Paula for more than a decade at the time of his appointment. During the 1960s the population of the neighborhood shifted from predominantly white to African-American. Father McKugo embarked on an evangelization program that continued with his successor, Father Patrick Curran. Their efforts resulted in a parish that had a membership of more than 400 Black Catholic families by the mid-1970s, and they administered to 200 non-Catholic families in various capacities.

In 1971, John Cardinal Cody appointed Rev. Herbert J. Meyr as pastor of the church, a post he retained until 1989. During his tenure as pastor, the parish converted the convent into the St. Francis de Paula Hospitality House. This house was a transitional family shelter and food pantry administered by Catholic Charities. In 1989, Joseph Cardinal Bernardin appointed Rev. Alan Scheible as the pastor of the church. After many years of financial difficulty, the parish closed in July 1991.

Separations

Scope & Content

The records in this collection comprise 15 archival boxes for the parish and one archival box for the school totaling 5.3 cubic feet. The largest portion of the collection pertains to parish bulletins, announcements, and a monthly newsletter entitled Parish Record. The Parish Record is a small booklet with parish news, death notices, and advertisements. Also, it contains information about parishioners' donations with their names, amount of donation, and street address (without the house number). Occasionally the children's donations are listed by name, amount of donation, and grade in school.

The remainder of the collection includes memorabilia from parish events, financial reports of the parish, and files from a university program entitled Urban Plunge. One notable portion of the collection consists of handwritten homilies and talks in Italian and English, and the first pastor, Father Angeletti, probably composed them.
